

What we do

Since 2000 when the charity was formed, we have invested thousands of pounds in to ground breaking research to develop new treatments to slow or prevent PKD progression, reduce pain, improve quality of life and ultimately, find a cure.

We do this in a number of ways:

Since 2000 when the charity was formed, we have invested thousands of pounds in to ground breaking research in to the development of new treatments to slow or prevent PKD progression, reduce pain, improve quality of life and ultimately, find a cure.

We also host support groups and events throughout the year to provide unwavering support and resources for our community. Whether they need information about managing the condition, emotional support from people who truly understand, or advocacy for research and treatments, we are here for them. These gatherings provide a vital sense of belonging and reassurance, reminding everyone that they are not alone in this journey.
